Surrey Docks Health Centre became a training practice in 2010. It is part of Southwark PCT and is in close proximity to Surrey Quays and Rotherhithe stations with access by a bus straight from Waterloo. It is outside congestion zone and parking is available on site.

Surrey Docks serves a varied socioeconomic population consisting of working class and city workers, amongst others. A large proportion of patients are between 20-60 years with the majority who are English speaking. The Health Centre is made up of 5 partners with special interests in Substance Misuse, Diabetes and COPD.

The Surgery is very welcoming and Dr Pamela Marrinan takes a proactive approach to training registrars. Carol McPaul, the practice manager is at hand to solve practical queries including time table, access cards, pay, leave and more. Overall, this is a great training practice with exposure to varied pathology and supportive staff.
